By the end of August 1951, six air raid shelters had been built in the Hsiangshan area, Peiping, which has been restricted because MAO Tse-tung lives there. These shelters are for government officials in case of raids on Peiping. The largest of these is near Piyun (紫雲) Temple. It is a modern structure with electric lights, running water, telephones, an anti-gas chamber, and ventilation installations. It contains large supplies of food and other daily necessities and can hold 2,000 people.
